How Our "Century of Dishonor" Has Been Replaced by an Era of Plain Swindling.

It is an accomplished fact that the slavelike treatment of the Indian and our attitude toward him is now regarded by our friends abroad with a feeling of surprise and regret. The Indian is not a savage, he is a fellow creature, and we cannot reject him. This is a new era in the history of the Indian. The era of dishonor and oppression is past. The era of plain swindling has begun. The Indian is no longer a slave, but he is still a subject of the government. The government is not content with its old method of treatment. It is determined to improve its methods. It is determined to do better.

The government has realized that it is necessary to change its methods. It is determined to make the Indian a citizen. It is determined to give him the same rights as other citizens. It is determined to do everything in its power to improve the condition of the Indian. It is determined to do everything in its power to help him. It is determined to do everything in its power to make him a man.

The government has realized that it is necessary to change its methods. It is determined to make the Indian a citizen. It is determined to give him the same rights as other citizens. It is determined to do everything in its power to improve the condition of the Indian. It is determined to do everything in its power to help him. It is determined to do everything in its power to make him a man.

On the other hand, the government is not content with its old method of treatment. It is determined to improve its methods. It is determined to do better. It is determined to do better. It is determined to do better.

The government has realized that it is necessary to change its methods. It is determined to make the Indian a citizen. It is determined to give him the same rights as other citizens. It is determined to do everything in its power to improve the condition of the Indian. It is determined to do everything in its power to help him. It is determined to do everything in its power to make him a man.

The government has realized that it is necessary to change its methods. It is determined to make the Indian a citizen. It is determined to give him the same rights as other citizens. It is determined to do everything in its power to improve the condition of the Indian. It is determined to do everything in its power to help him. It is determined to do everything in its power to make him a man.

The government has realized that it is necessary to change its methods. It is determined to make the Indian a citizen. It is determined to give him the same rights as other citizens. It is determined to do everything in its power to improve the condition of the Indian. It is determined to do everything in its power to help him. It is determined to do everything in its power to make him a man.