Undismayed by Poverty Joseph Davidson Fitted Himself for a Notable Career in Art--Unusual Success Here and Abroad.

Joseph Davidson, Sculptor, at Work.

Sculptor Mr. Davidson turned many of the works here and abroad which have brought him the highest honors. One admirer has expressed a belief that his works most beautiful, and asked for this on the front of a hotel card. One of the prominent

Mr. Davidson was on the water front, being the point that is natural to choose when sculpting the figure of a whale.

To take on the story of his travels, Mr. Davidson first went to South America, where he studied the art of carving. Then he went to the United States, and that is all he needed to know. When he was ready to start on his first work, he went to Europe, where he studied the art of sculpture, and there he found what he would like to know.

To make a likeness, Mr. Davidson first went to South America, where he studied the art of carving. Then he went to the United States, and that is all he needed to know. When he was ready to start on his first work, he went to Europe, where he studied the art of sculpture, and there he found what he would like to know.

The honor was then conferred.

"Are you an artist?" he asked.

"Yes, of course I am," replied the sculptor.

"Then why don't you get a picture to pay for your expenses?"

"Because I am an artist, and I don't need to get a picture to pay for my expenses."

The sculptor's portrait was then taken.

"He is the best sculptor in the world," said Mr. Davidson.

"Yes, he is," said the sculptor.

"And he is the best sculptor in the world," said Mr. Davidson again.

"Yes, he is," said the sculptor.

The sculptor's portrait was then taken.

After a long wait, the sculptor was able to get a picture of the sculptor.

"Are you an artist?" he asked.

"Yes, of course I am," replied the sculptor.

"Then why don't you get a picture to pay for your expenses?"

"Because I am an artist, and I don't need to get a picture to pay for my expenses."

The sculptor's portrait was then taken.

"He is the best sculptor in the world," said Mr. Davidson.

"Yes, he is," said the sculptor.

"And he is the best sculptor in the world," said Mr. Davidson again.

"Yes, he is," said the sculptor.

The sculptor's portrait was then taken.

After a long wait, the sculptor was able to get a picture of the sculptor.

"Are you an artist?" he asked.

"Yes, of course I am," replied the sculptor.

"Then why don't you get a picture to pay for your expenses?"

"Because I am an artist, and I don't need to get a picture to pay for my expenses."

The sculptor's portrait was then taken.

After a long wait, the sculptor was able to get a picture of the sculptor.