The Martyr President Was a Frequent Theatregoer and Made Friends of Many Actors and Actresses.

In the fall of 1865, one of our favorite pastimes was a visit to the White House. The President and his family were often entertained by theatrical performances, and Lincoln was a constant and enthusiastic patron. He was known to be a great admirer of the stage and often attended performances at the Ford's Theatre, where many prominent actors and actresses performed.

One of the most memorable occasions was when Lincoln attended a performance of "Our American Cousin" on April 14, 1865. In the role of Mr. Lincoln,演艺者 John Wilkes Booth shot him in the back of the neck, killing him instantly.

The President was a man of many interests and was always eager to support the arts. His常说 of the "higher theater" may have been an indication of his love for the performing arts and his desire to elevate the public's appreciation of the arts.

THE LAST PORTRAIT OF LINCOLN
Painted from Life by Matthew Wilson Two Weeks Before the Assassination.

By Charles Henry Hart.

It is said that Mr. Lincoln was a frequent visitor to the White House. He enjoyed the company of the actors and actresses who performed there, and he often attended the performances. He was known to be an ardent supporter of the arts and was always eager to promote the use of the arts in education.

In the fall of 1865, one of our favorite pastimes was a visit to the White House. The President and his family were often entertained by theatrical performances, and Lincoln was a constant and enthusiastic patron. He was known to be a great admirer of the stage and often attended performances at the Ford's Theatre, where many prominent actors and actresses performed.

One of the most memorable occasions was when Lincoln attended a performance of "Our American Cousin" on April 14, 1865. In the role of Mr. Lincoln,演艺者 John Wilkes Booth shot him in the back of the neck, killing him instantly.

The President was a man of many interests and was always eager to support the arts. His常说 of the "higher theater" may have been an indication of his love for the performing arts and his desire to elevate the public's appreciation of the arts.

THE LAST PORTRAIT OF LINCOLN
Painted from Life by Matthew Wilson Two Weeks Before the Assassination.

By Charles Henry Hart.

In the fall of 1865, one of our favorite pastimes was a visit to the White House. The President and his family were often entertained by theatrical performances, and Lincoln was a constant and enthusiastic patron. He was known to be a great admirer of the stage and often attended performances at the Ford's Theatre, where many prominent actors and actresses performed.

One of the most memorable occasions was when Lincoln attended a performance of "Our American Cousin" on April 14, 1865. In the role of Mr. Lincoln,演艺者 John Wilkes Booth shot him in the back of the neck, killing him instantly.

The President was a man of many interests and was always eager to support the arts. His常说 of the "higher theater" may have been an indication of his love for the performing arts and his desire to elevate the public's appreciation of the arts.

THE LAST PORTRAIT OF LINCOLN
Painted from Life by Matthew Wilson Two Weeks Before the Assassination.

By Charles Henry Hart.

In the fall of 1865, one of our favorite pastimes was a visit to the White House. The President and his family were often entertained by theatrical performances, and Lincoln was a constant and enthusiastic patron. He was known to be a great admirer of the stage and often attended performances at the Ford's Theatre, where many prominent actors and actresses performed.

One of the most memorable occasions was when Lincoln attended a performance of "Our American Cousin" on April 14, 1865. In the role of Mr. Lincoln,演艺者 John Wilkes Booth shot him in the back of the neck, killing him instantly.

The President was a man of many interests and was always eager to support the arts. His常说 of the "higher theater" may have been an indication of his love for the performing arts and his desire to elevate the public's appreciation of the arts.

THE LAST PORTRAIT OF LINCOLN
Painted from Life by Matthew Wilson Two Weeks Before the Assassination.

By Charles Henry Hart.

In the fall of 1865, one of our favorite pastimes was a visit to the White House. The President and his family were often entertained by theatrical performances, and Lincoln was a constant and enthusiastic patron. He was known to be a great admirer of the stage and often attended performances at the Ford's Theatre, where many prominent actors and actresses performed.

One of the most memorable occasions was when Lincoln attended a performance of "Our American Cousin" on April 14, 1865. In the role of Mr. Lincoln,演艺者 John Wilkes Booth shot him in the back of the neck, killing him instantly.

The President was a man of many interests and was always eager to support the arts. His常说 of the "higher theater" may have been an indication of his love for the performing arts and his desire to elevate the public's appreciation of the arts.