GRAVE OF LINCOLN'S ASSASSIN DISCLOSED AT LAST

After Nearly Fifty Years, the Spot Where J. Wilkes Booth's Body Is Buried Is Located—Living Witnesses to Midnight Intermont Tell the Story.

By "Grand Targher." Today was the day of the unveiling of the memorial to President Lincoln in Gettysburg, with the hopes that it would bring some public and national attention to the well-known crime of the assassination of President Lincoln. It was a day of great excitement and anticipation for the people of the town, who had been eagerly waiting for the event to take place.

In the early morning hours, as the sun began to rise, the town was already awake and bustling. People were seen hurrying to the site of the memorial, eager to witness the unveiling. The atmosphere was electric, with the sound of music, speeches, and cheers filling the air.

As the day progressed, the day became hotter, but the enthusiasm among the people remained high. The ceremony was a great success, with many people expressing their support for the move to bring the memorial to Gettysburg.

The day ended with a public dinner, where the attendees had the opportunity to enjoy the company of one another and reflect on the significance of the day. Overall, it was a memorable day for the town, and one that will be remembered for years to come.

END OF REPORT.