YESTERDAY'S ANNIVERSARY--THE BEGINNING OF THE GREAT CIVIL WAR SEMI-CENTENARIANS--HOW NEW YORK TIMES REPORTERS DESCRIBED THE EVENT AT THE TIME.

Lincoln's Inauguration, March 4, 1861.

FROM THE ORIGINAL NEGATIVE OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

In the 1860s, the American Civil War was a major conflict that lasted from 1861 to 1865. The New York Times reported extensively on the war, including the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln as President in 1861. The report captures the atmosphere and events surrounding the inauguration, highlighting the significance of the moment in the context of the war.

The article includes a photograph of Lincoln's inauguration, along with a description of the scene and the reactions of the attendees. The New York Times also provides insight into the political climate leading up to the war and the role of the newspapers in shaping public opinion.

The text is a historical document that offers a glimpse into the past, providing valuable information about the civil war and its impact on American society. The report serves as a primary source for understanding the events leading up to and during the Civil War, offering a window into the lives of those who lived through this tumultuous period.
LINCOLN AS THE TIMES MEN SAW HIM IN 1861

His Journey to Washington as Told in Pen and Paper--Pictures of Scenes That Would Be Strange Today.

The President John C. Breckinridge, Who Proposed the Secession Resolutions.

Mr. Lincoln was prominently featured in the story of Abraham Lincoln, the 16th President of the United States, as he traveled to Washington in 1861. The journey was marked by a series of events that would ultimately lead to the Civil War, and the story was told through a series of pen and paper pictures captures the scenes that would be strange today.