THE REMARKABLE CONFESSIONS OF A COUNTRY PARSON

Actual Experiences of a Preacher Show Not Only the Hardships of Service, But the Lack of Business Principles in Some Small Congregations.

By John Southern.

When the pastor made his weekly rounds the members paid him what they felt to be fair interest. Therefore bought a study and cof-s the

The pastor made his weekly rounds the members paid him what they felt to be fair interest. Therefore bought a study and cof-s the

This expression put me in a dilemma. I was not of the sect that hold church membership a premium, and I was not accustomed to paying for such services. However, I decided to do without it.

The parson consisted of two companies

I was thus convinced that the parson was not the person to whom I should entrust my affairs. I decided to take another course.

The expression put me in a dilemma. I was not of the sect that hold church membership a premium, and I was not accustomed to paying for such services. However, I decided to do without it.

The parson consisted of two companies

In this firm there was no written agreement whatever, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service.

In this firm there was no written agreement whatever, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount.

The parson consisted of two companies

When the pastor made his weekly rounds the members paid him what they felt to be fair interest. Therefore bought a study and cof-s the

This expression put me in a dilemma. I was not of the sect that hold church membership a premium, and I was not accustomed to paying for such services. However, I decided to do without it.

The parson consisted of two companies

In this firm there was no written agreement whatever, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service.

In this firm there was no written agreement whatever, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount.

The parson consisted of two companies

In this firm there was no written agreement whatever, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service.

In this firm there was no written agreement whatever, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service. There was no written notice, but the pastor was accustomed to receive a certain amount. This amount was the same as the fee for the service.