THE NEGLECTED POSSIBILITIES OF CITY ROOFS

Making the Best of Out-of-Door Life Is Slowly Being Learned—Comparatively Easy to Turn Roofs Into Gardens, Playgrounds and Concert Rooms.

When one considers the advantages of living on the roof, it is surprising that more people do not do it. The roof is a natural extension of the living room, and yet it is largely unused. The possibilities of making the roof a delightful place are almost endless.

The roof can be transformed into a garden, a playground, or a concert hall. It is a place where one can escape from the noise and bustle of the city, and enjoy the fresh air and sunshine. The roof is also a place where one can have privacy, as it is often difficult to obtain privacy in the city.

A roof garden can be created by planting flowers and vegetables, and by providing seating areas. It can be a place where one can relax and enjoy the beauty of nature. A roof garden can also be used as a place for social gatherings, as it is a private space.

A roof playground can be created by providing play equipment, such as swings, slides, and climbing structures. It can be a place where children can play and have fun. A roof playground can also be used as a place for family gatherings, as it is a private space.

A roof concert hall can be created by providing seating areas and a stage. It can be a place where concerts and other events can be held. A roof concert hall can also be used as a place for community gatherings, as it is a private space.

In conclusion, the roof is a place that is vastly underutilized. With a little imagination and effort, it can be transformed into a garden, a playground, or a concert hall. It is a place where one can enjoy the beauty of nature, and have privacy.

Published: August 27, 1911
Copyright © The New York Times