Swiss Professor Tells of Professional Criminals and the Means of Detecting Them in a Book That Has the Indorsement of M. Lepine, Head of the Paris Police.

The Swiss Professor, Dr. Heinrich Ilg, who is well known for his book on the methods of the French criminal police, has now written a book on the methods of detection employed by the Paris police under the direction of M. Lepine. The book is called "Professional Criminals of Paris," and it is a valuable contribution to the study of criminal psychology.

Dr. Ilg states that the methods of detection employed by the Paris police are based on a thorough knowledge of the criminal classes and their habits. The police have a large number of criminals under observation, and they have a system of registering all offenders, so that they can keep track of them and follow their movements. The police also have a system of fingerprinting, which is a valuable tool in the detection of criminals.

Dr. Ilg states that the police have a large number of criminals under observation, and they have a system of registering all offenders, so that they can keep track of them and follow their movements. The police also have a system of fingerprinting, which is a valuable tool in the detection of criminals.

In conclusion, Dr. Ilg states that the methods of detection employed by the Paris police are based on a thorough knowledge of the criminal classes and their habits. The police have a large number of criminals under observation, and they have a system of registering all offenders, so that they can keep track of them and follow their movements. The police also have a system of fingerprinting, which is a valuable tool in the detection of criminals.